The world is changing. As we confront transformative political, economic, social and technological change, global organizations and communities must evolve in parallel to ensure the preservation of business relationships, manage risk, maintain profitability, and safeguard widespread access to justice. This can only be done by embracing that the profound impact these changes will have on business and life will necessitate a "new way" of working together to ensure the settlement of conflict worldwide.

This program identifies and untangles the complex web of competing interests, needs and wants of international businesses in balancing competing stakeholder interests. By diffusing conflict, encouraging dialogue, and harnessing collective knowledge, organizations can tune out the noise and free up resources to focus on the challenges ahead.
