

Emma-May Litchfield and Danielle Hutchinson are principals at the Australian-based consulting firm, Resolution Resources, who provide dispute resolution services and solutions both nationally and internationally. Together they work as dispute resolution advisors, providers, and educators. Their expertise lies in the use of evidence-based practice, and the development of professional standards, dispute systems and tools to measure and/or monitor progress.

Danielle and Emma-May are academics, who focus on applied empirical research. They work in both the Melbourne Graduate School of Education at the University of Melbourne and the Graduate School of Business and Law at RMIT University. Danielle and Emma-May sit on the Academic Committee of the Global Pound Conference Series 2016-17 (GPC) and are the co-authors of 'The Singapore Report', a commissioned analysis of the qualitative and quantitative data from the GPC Singapore.

RESOLUTION RESOURCES

ADVISORS | PRACTITIONERS | EDUCATORS