

Dr. Christoph Oertel, LL.M. is partner at Brödermann Jahn, a Hamburg based boutique law firm specializing on international business law.

Christoph advises his clients mostly in international projects, in national and trans-border corporate transactions (M&A and, e.g., advice to funds or start-up in second round financing) as well as in national and international trade law. When drafting contracts, Christoph puts a focus on the international background of his mandates.

Some examples of Christoph's recent experiences are:

- In-depth legal analysis on the possibilities to cancel a sales contract of lead antimony alloy bound for China concluded between a trader in metals, concentrates and similar materials with a German smelting company.
- Negotiation of the exit of an international provider of technical building equipment in a multinational construction project in northern Africa.
- Advice to start-up companies in Germany on legal aspects of their general business conditions for their online shops.
- Advice for a distribution contract for cogeneration units.
- Advice for software and hardware reseller contracts in the EU.

Apart from his experience in transactions with a cross border dimension, Christoph has been involved in a number of mandates relating to issues of compliance during the last years. He advises his clients on questions of customs and export control law but has also gained experience in general questions of good corporate governance, such as prevention of corruption in national and international contexts.

Last but not least Christoph has advised companies in situations of financial crisis and in insolvency scenarios.
