Sebastiaan has been an international trade and transport lawyer since 1998, and a partner in AKD's Transport & Energy practice group since 2008. He deals mainly with cases concerning the international sale of goods, commercial contracts throughout the entire supply chain and logistics services. Sebastiaan is a specialist in resolving cargo conflicts, and is regularly appointed in connection with cross-border disputes involving cargo ownership, arrests, security rights and the like. His clients include overseas companies with an international distribution or agency network, commodities traders and logistics service providers.

International trade requires specialised, integrated services combined with specific sector expertise. The international value chain combines many legal issues: contract management, carriage of goods, payment structures, intellectual property, competition rules and dispute settlement through arbitration or court proceedings. By combining all of these aspects, Sebastiaan can assist clients at all stages of their activities in the supply chain, whether it comes to contract preparation and negotiations, termination of continuing performance contracts, supporting operational activities, or solving disputes through litigation or arbitration.

Sebastiaan is Director of Commissions of the Union Internationale des Avocats (UIA), and has chaired the UIA's Private International Law Commission from 2007 through 2011.
