Dear colleagues, dear friends,

After Toronto, it is time to return to Europe, and more precisely to Portugal and to the city of Porto, located alongside the Douro River. Porto is a vibrant city registered as a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1996.

Porto is also famous for the Douro River and its wine. With its Quintas (farms) that extend along the almost vertical slopes of the Douro valleys, Porto offers an unforgettable experience to our colleagues and their families.

This year, Congress main themes are limited to two: "Legal Practice in the Digital Era" and "Legal Challenges of Modern Day Slavery".

The legal practice has entered the digital age. Are lawyers gradually being replaced by computers? Which challenges does the digital era raise for the legal practice?

43 commissions and working groups are UIA's strength. The cutting edge legal content provided during their working sessions at the Congress enable participants to increase their knowledge in different practice areas.

This Congress has the support of the Portuguese Bar Association which represents around 30.000 lawyers and regulates the profession protects its social role, dignity and prestige and promotes access to knowledge and the application of the law.

UIA members and friends already know this, but I would like to assure to first time participants that a UIA Congress is the right place to make new friends and to establish long-standing business relationships.

But as life is more than work, alongside the scientific program, our Congress will also provide high quality social and leisure programs to enjoy the charm of Porto.

I am sure that with your support and strong participation, the 2018 Porto UIA Congress will be a huge success.

Pedro PAIS DE ALMEIDA
UIA President

Welcome to Portugal

From the time when Prince Henry the Navigator encouraged Portuguese sea captains to undertake a series of daring oceanic voyages, Portugal, a small country on the extreme edge of Europe, became the first post-feudal western empire, and in fact ended up being the last European colonial power.

Thus it came about that Portugal, though small, spread its influence around the world to Asia, Africa and the Americas creating in the process a unique "blend" between the culture and civilisation of this country and the cultures and civilisations of the various peoples with whom the Portuguese inter-acted.

Perhaps it is this openness to other cultures that is also the reason why this country has been so willingly accepted as a constructive and indeed leading, though not dominating, participant in the ongoing relationships within the world of Portuguese-speaking countries, a community (it may be noted) that accounts for around 250 million people.

In welcoming you today in Portugal, let me say how very proud we are to have the UIA Congress here in the City of Porto, capital of Portugal's northern region. It is our ambition to do everything we can to ensure that all of you attending this Congress have a wonderful and unforgettable experience during your stay.

It is fair to say as we look back that Portugal was the starting point of a social phenomenon which, whether we like it or not, nowadays affects us all namely "globalisation". We also recognise, with the perspective of history, that this country played an active role both positive and negative in the development of what are now rightly seen to be "human rights". With these thoughts in our minds, I am fully confident that Porto will prove to be an inspirational place for us to discuss the two main themes chosen for our Congress.

Taking inspiration from our ancestors, let us try - through our discussions - to meet that challenge and to generate new ideas and formulate new and imaginative responses to both themes.

At the same time, I urge you all not to miss the opportunity to enjoy to the full the charm and hospitality of this beautiful city of Porto.

Welcome to the UIA 2018 Congress.

Bringing Together
the World's Lawyers

The UIA is a global and multi-cultural organisation for the legal profession. Created in 1927, the UIA brings together members from more than 120 countries. The UIA facilitates professional development and international exchange of information and ideas, promotes the rule of law, defends the independence and freedom of lawyers worldwide, and emphasises friendship, collegiality and networking among members.

Today, the UIA reaches around two million lawyers through its individual and collective members (bar associations, lawyers' federations and organisations) worldwide.

Different categories of membership are available, depending on your profile and the country in which you practice law.

Join the UIA
and become a member of the world's strongest network of lawyers

You can join one of the 43 UIA commissions and share your experience with professionals from all over the world, during seminars, training courses and the UIA annual congress.

You will also be able to join forces with the UIA Institute for the Rule of Law (UIA-IROL) which yearly provides its support to lawyers who cannot freely practice their profession. Everywhere in the world where rights of defence are threatened or the proper administration of justice is hindered, the UIA will make your voice heard.

By becoming a member of the UIA you can also benefit from a preferential rate for your registration to the congress. To find out more, go to the UIA website at: www.uanet.org

MAIN THEMES

9.00 AM - 12.30 PM - DESPACHANTES WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31

MAIN THEME 1: LEGAL CHALLENGES OF MODERN DAY SLAVERY

Coordinator:

Gonçalo MATIAS (Saraiva Matias e Associados) Lisbon, Portugal

9.00 am - 10.30 am > Panel 1:

Modern-day-Slavery - Concepts and Developments in a Globalized Economy

Slavery changed its forms and is less today about literal ownership of people – except in some countries like Mauritania, where ancestral forms of slavery survive- and more about exploitation and systemic cases of coercion on a large scale.

Modern-day slavery is an umbrella concept covering various forms of severe exploitation affecting vulnerable workers. The recent focus on human trafficking and its definition respond to the new challenges of globalization, with millions of workers targeted by governments and companies in search of cheap labor. Worldwide, thousands of organizations are engaged in the fight to stop modern slavery and Member States of the United Nations have committed to fight against modern slavery in accordance with Sustainable Development Goal 8.7. It has been demonstrated that traffickers are responsive to risk. Therefore, anti-poverty strategies and policies must be coupled with international cooperation for the adoption of anti-slavery laws and for enforcement of these laws by local police, prosecutors and judges via capacity building programs.

Speakers:

Brahim EBETY (Étude Brahim Ebety) Nouakchott, Mauritania

Elizabeth ESPINOSA (Senior Vice President, The Law Society of South Wales) Sydney, Australia

Gonçalo MATIAS (Saraiva Matias e Associados) Lisbon, Portugal

José María RAMÍREZ MACHADO (Senior Programme and Operations Officer, Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work Branch Governance (FUNDAMENTALS), ILO – International Labour Organization) Geneva, Switzerland

11.10 am - 12.30 pm > Panel 2:

Business's responsibility to eradicate labor slavery from supply chains

Organisations need to account for the social, environmental and economic consequences of their supply chain operations. Effective corporate and social responsibility (CSR) policies mitigate risk and influence the market perception of a corporate identity. But the nature of labor slavery in many industries - a corrupt and usually hidden criminal activity - is such that even the most scrupulous corporations will risk purveying slavery-tainted goods for economic gain. While national governments of source countries have to take responsibility for the problem, corporations must engage in dialogue with those governments about the enforcement of criminal laws against slavery. Government AND business must collaborate to identify and investigate those individuals who are profiting from the unpaid, coerced and exploited work of children and adults in their industries.

Speakers:

Rosana GARCÍANDIA GARMENDIA (Research Associate & Visiting Lecturer, King's College London) London, United Kingdom

Marie-Laure GUISLAIN (Head of litigation - Globalisation and Human Rights Program - CSR, Sherpa) Paris, France

Session sponsor

9.00 AM - 12.30 PM - DESPACHANTES THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1

MAIN THEME 2: LEGAL PRACTICE IN THE DIGITAL ERA

This theme addresses the digital revolution and its challenges for the practice of law. The use of cloud-based tools, big data, artificial intelligence (AI) and voice recognition technology is expected to improve access to justice and allow for new ways of providing legal services. However, it will also significantly affect the way our profession is structured. Seeing as these challenges will have a major impact on the direction of our profession over the next decade, now is the time for UIA members to discuss them in detail.

Coordinator: Marc GALLARDO (RSM) Barcelona, Spain

9.00 am - 9:10 am > Opening Remarks

Corruption in Latin America: Recent Legislative Changes and Judicial Decisions that Have Taken Place in our Countries Indicate that we are Moving Forward against Corruption in the Region

Latin America has always been known for its endemic corruption. Regardless of the exaggerated stereotype, it is a fact that for centuries our countries have suffered from the prevalence of this scourge. In recent years, we have seen several signs that this situation is changing for the better. The development of computerised resources, with data crossing and transparency, democratic consolidation, freedom of the press and even the widespread use of social networks, have led to widespread rejection of corruption, with major social and political movements, which, in certain cases, have resulted in legislative changes and landmark court decisions. It is in this context that we are going to study different cases and discuss the methodologies available to combat corruption.

Privacy and Rights of the Digital Person ■ Miniaturas	Governance of Artificial Intelligence and Governance based on Artificial Intelligence As AI needs algorithms and data to function, it is quite possible to talk of Data Governance (e.g. the role of a DPO and what the GDPR implies in terms of management and process) and Data-driven Governance (e.g. Data-driven public policies). Of course, the same applies to algorithms: Algorithm Governance (e.g., the issue of transparency and loyalty) and Governance based on AI solutions (for the consumer, the examples are innumerable). We will also study privacy issues in an AI world (systematic facial recognition, generalisation of scoring and societal scoring).

In some cases, the possibility of summary disposition of claims has also been provided for. Our first panel will examine and compare expedited procedures offered by various institutions, the experience with such procedures to date and techniques for effective case management. Panel 2: Reflecting on Sixty Years of the New York Convention To mark the sixtieth anniversary of the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards of 1958, our second panel will consider its contribution to the development of international arbitration. Our panel of experts will review some of the areas of difficulty in applying the Convention, identifying the challenges that lie ahead.
Corporate Law and Mergers & Acquisitions ■ Porto	The Impact of Compliance in the M&A Transactions: Risk or Opportunity? We will study the growing need to establish rigorous anti-corruption protocols to ensure compliance with policies and procedures that comport to U.S., British, European and global standards. The growth of globalization is imposing to any company doing business in different jurisdictions the need to rigorously police the entire organization to mitigate the risk of corrupt practices even in locations where corruption is an accepted reality of doing business. The commission will consider the challenges that companies face in this area in three ways: (i) How internal compliance programs and internal investigations together with a clearly communicated "tone at the top," where deeds, and not just words, demonstrate an institutional commitment to the highest ethical standards, (ii) how an organization should conduct due diligence on target acquisitions to ensure that there is a shared vision of corporate compliance and to ascertain where there is risk to the combined organization from the acquisition or business combination and (iii) methods to mitigate risk or historical issues regarding compliance that are identified either internally or within the target.
Criminal Law ■ D. Luís	Money Laundering and Offshore Activities The Panama papers and further leaks have revealed that money laundering and tax evasion are high on the political agenda, often going hand in hand. Offshore centres are seen as playing a critical role in the hiding of illicit activities and criminal property. Governments have sought to combat money laundering and tax evasion in a number of ways, whether this is by increasing the compliance burden onto so called "facilitators", such as banks, lawyers, notaries, real estate agents etc., to police their own clients, or by increased criminal sanctions for individuals and / or corporates involved in potential wrongdoing. Whilst increased regulation of traditional monies and transactions is on the rise, cryptocurrencies appear to leave open a potential loophole. How are governments responding to this potential additional threat? What are the potential ramifications of all these measures on the legal profession, on our clients and on businesses?
Administrative Law / Environmental Law and Sustainable Development ■ Arrábida	Legal Challenges in Public Procurement: Labour, Administrative and Environmental Aspects The public procurement process plays a key role in ensuring that public contracts are awarded in a fair, efficient and transparent manner as well as in protecting civil, social and environmental rights. In Europe, public procurement is a market-based means of achieving the EU's 2020 strategic goal of smart, sustainable and inclusive growth. Directive 2014/24/EU deals with the awarding of public contracts and the integration of social and environmental provisions. Contracts should be awarded based on objective criteria to ensure compliance with the principles of transparency, non-discrimination, equal treatment and environmental protection. These issues will be discussed during the session which will include experts from the organising commissions and from different jurisdictions. Those attending will have the opportunity to participate actively in the discussion and submit questions.

Digitalisation Changes the World – But Does it Change the Tax World and How?

The factors that until now have determined how to allocate taxable income among different states are in the process of dissolving. The traditional basis of where the taxed entity had its “permanent establishments” was one of the clearest, most reliable factors. It was something you could see, touch – and tax. But where are the permanent establishments of a website company? Where is the “place of management” if all of the officers of the company are perpetually travelling, holding meetings via Skype from different locations.

What new factors should replace the old ones? Or does should the international allocation of taxable income be reworked from the ground up? Developed countries (which essentially created the old rules) will prefer different factors from emerging economies. The session will analyse this and other impacts of digitalisation on the tax world and consider possible solutions from different perspectives.

Respect for Privacy, a Right at Risk?

We will discuss whether privacy is effectively safeguarded in the workplace, as the monitoring of employees’ electronic communications is more commonly used by employers, and talk about the current jurisprudence in this regard, mainly that of the European Court of human rights.

We will also analyse the impact of fighting major crimes on Human Rights and, particularly, on the respect for privacy. In this context, we will focus on the protection of persons with regards to the processing and exploitation of their data on the Internet as part of preventing criminal offences, and on the consequences of such procedures on professional secrecy.

The Administration’s Involvement in Labour Relations: What Are the Practical and Legal Implications?

The major role played by the Labour Administration and Labour Inspectorate systems in the context of the economic and social development of States is recognized by the ILO Convention, the ILO Declaration of Philadelphia and the ILO Declaration on Social Justice for a Fair Globalisation.

The aim of the session is to identify, using a comparative approach to the practices of the various European Union and other States, how the Labour Administration ensures compliance with labour law through its role of counsel, prevention and oversight, and even interventionism, in particular in the field of the promotion of occupational health and safety, employee protection and Social Security benefits, the promotion of fundamental rights, in particular non-discrimination, and the appropriate functioning of workplace relations and social dialog.

The session will also seek to focus on how, as a result of the economic crisis, numerous countries have been forced to adopt rescue measures, in particular in the areas of dismissals on economic grounds, employment and unemployment benefit.

Robotic Art: Automated Art Creation and New Legal Issues

Although early examples of robotic art and theatre existed in ancient China (mechanical orchestra, flying mechanised doves and fish, angels and dragons etc.), the names of their creators have mostly been lost to history. Advances in engineering have created new possibilities for the automated creation of artworks, which is now booming with the advent of Artificial Intelligence.

On the one hand, robotics have now become a mode of expression for artists confronting fundamental issues and contradictions in our advanced industrial culture. This movement, known as Algorithmic Art, is the fruit of reflection by artists on the omnipresence of automated IT related tasks, managed daily by algorithms. It is also an understanding of the importance and the place of artists in the field of creation and the very notion of authorship. On the other hand, algorithms are increasingly used to automatically create music, journalistic contents or databases with little or no human intervention, raising complex and mostly unresolved issues about existence, ownership and exploitation of copyrights and moral rights.

The legal impact and challenges of these issues will be discussed during this session.

Unmanned Vehicles – Where to Go Without a Driver and Who to Sue?

Driverless cars, “platooning” of trucks, automated vessels and drones: unmanned vehicles are not the fantasy of a distant future but an issue which may soon concern our daily life. The related legal issues are complex, ranging from liability (who shall be liable for damage to property and/or for personal injuries, how to identify the person who may be liable, and how can liability be controlled?) over insurance (liability insurance, but also property insurance, what coverage is appropriate?) to regulatory implications such as registration requirements, mandatory insurance and coverage limits. The issues may be different for semi-automated vehicles on the one hand and fully automated vehicles on the other. Unmanned vehicles and technologies like blockchain will have an influence on the supply chains; there will be issues of contractual risk management. It will need to be determined whether the existing legal rules, including international conventions, require amendments and to what extent they need to be amended.

Apple & Amazon Cases - Illegal State Aid or a New Tax Battle between the EU and US?

The European Commission (EC) declared that Ireland “granted undue tax benefits of up to €13 billion to Apple” and instructed Ireland to recover the undue tax benefits. Amazon has been ordered to repay €250m in illegal state aid to Luxembourg. On June 27, 2016, the EC published its decision concluding that an advance pricing agreement (APA) granted to a Starbucks subsidiary by the Netherlands is illegal state aid and ordering recovery of the aid by the Netherlands.

The Commission adopted a couple of other decisions and a number of other cases are still under investigation. Appeals have been lodged against each of these Commission decisions, and the position of the General Court is eagerly awaited.

The EU is not claiming Apple or other multinationals broke any tax rules but that their “sweetheart” from EU Member States were, in fact, illegal because their tax arrangement gave unfair advantages and therefore amounted to illegal “state aid” affecting the internal market.

We will analyse the cases from the Competition Law, EU Law, and Tax Law perspective and elaborate on whether we are facing a technical discussion related to fair trade and taxation or a competition conflict between the European Union and the United States. And how this is connected with the fact that there is no harmonisation of direct taxation but that tax advantages are being targeted as illegal aids. We will also identify universal lessons that can be learnt from those cases for other undertakings operating in the EU and benefiting from favourable tax treatment.

How to Convince the Other Lawyer to Use Mediation?

Mediation is still developing in many jurisdictions and convincing the other lawyer is a key issue for its future. All too often, lawyers are frustrated in their attempts to resolve a dispute amicably through mediation, due to resistance or outright refusal from the opposing counsel. In this session, you will hear tips and techniques, shared by experienced mediators and lawyers who practice alternative dispute resolution, on how to create a setting or a dialog with the opposing counsel so as to maximise your chances of them accepting mediation for a dispute with your client.

After collecting the participants' ideas, we will test them through a role play and three experienced lawyers/mediators will share their experiences and their thoughts on the topic.

Artificial Intelligence and Professional Responsibility: Time for New Rules?

Artificial intelligence in the legal domain encompasses the simple to the complex, from advanced word search programming to quasi-adjudication and outcome prediction. Traditional legal work in the area of due diligence can be handled in meaningful ways by technology. For now, though, artificial intelligence remains at the service of lawyers, implicating traditional rules of professional responsibility. These include supervision, maintenance of client confidentiality, competence and diligence, among others. This panel will explore the current applications of ethical rules, and consider whether new rules are needed to fully embrace the expansive use of artificial intelligence. Following an overview of the issues, the panel will then focus in depth on two core issues: case prediction and smart contracts.

The Challenges for Rights-Holders, Reputation Management and Data in the Digital Millennium

The online world presents both opportunities and challenges. The ease with which brands can be promoted, with which content and data can be shared and with which goods and services can be provided across the digital plane makes them an easy target for infringers and hackers. The reputation of an organisation depends not just on the quality or exclusivity of its goods or services, but also on the quality of its online security and how well it protects its assets. Counterfeiting, piracy and infringement, defamation and data security are constant threats which organisations need to keep in check. Are the law and procedural rules keeping up with continual advances in both technology and the methods of the cyber criminals? What improvements could be made to give our clients better protection?

Private International Law Best Practices in Cross-Border Dispute Resolution

International litigation and arbitration in civil and commercial matters involve some issues that are more complex than in domestic cases. The program will include suggestions on how to prepare documents to commence legal proceedings and what matters should be considered in order to obtain or to avoid the subsequent enforcement of the decision abroad. The program will also address procedural strategies to achieve the best outcomes for our clients (e.g.: parallel proceedings, negative declarations, torpedo actions, and differences between litigation and arbitration including the taking of evidence in cross-border scenarios). The speakers, from different countries, will use case studies to highlight crucial points with the aim to provide a platform for exchange of experiences among all participants and to identify some best practices on these subjects.

Business and Human Rights / Fashion Law ■ D. Luís  Session sponsor	There has been significant progress in relation to the requirements for companies to ensure mandatory reporting and greater transparency in supply chains. The UK Modern Slavery Act, the California Transparency in Supply Chains Act and the new French Vigilance Law represent welcome developments in this area. The Fashion industry is particularly at risk. Despite growing awareness and legal developments, the International Labour Organisation estimated that approximately 40 million people were victims of Modern Slavery in 2016, with one in four of those victims being children. Are we doing enough? Although there has been progress in certain jurisdictions, legislation with effective sanctions as a deterrent to modern slavery practices is by no means uniformly applied worldwide. What are the incentives for companies to work to eliminate the scourge of Modern Slavery within their supply chains? Are economic sanctions and reputational risk sufficient? What is the role of the lawyer in such situations? Are lawyers to act as the conscience of the organisations they advise? Is there a need to plug the gap between mere compliance and effectiveness in doing the right thing?

International Sale of Goods ■ D. Maria	Is it Wise, and is it still Properly Defensible to Continue to Exclude this Vienna Convention Blindly, Merely Because we are More Comfortable Using our National Law? In our practice as specialists in international sales under the Vienna Convention, my colleagues and I have observed with dismay that many of our colleagues rule out the use of one of the most harmonised instruments at present, for the sole reason, in reality, that they are not proficient in its application and/or that they feel considerably more comfortable using their national law. This is despite the fact that the main advantage of the CISG is to provide common, balanced language for international sales, through which each stakeholder, regardless of his/her country, can understand and ascertain the legal and economic position of his/her partner. This overly/excessively frequent exclusion of the CISG is moreover not without risks: some courts are now prepared to penalise lawyers who may have advised their clients to exclude the CISG, on the grounds that, in light of the circumstances, this was a breach of their duty to advise.
Biotechnology Law / Food Law / Environmental Law and Sustainable Development / Health Law ■ D. Luís	What Do the Applications of Gene Editing, Artificial Intelligence and Big Data Bring to the Fields of Life Science, Medical Supply, Food Supply and Environmental Impact? Recent progress in biotechnology is marvellous. However, it may involve some unexpected dangers that threaten human dignity, security, health and rights, as well as the environment. This joint session will focus on these risks and discuss the legal and ethical implications from the four standpoints of each commission's specialty. Issues concerning GMOs, genetic medicine, privacy protection from big data, problems in developing countries and supply chains, among others, will be presented and discussed.
Immigration and Nationality Law ■ Arrábida	When Immigration Turns Into Slavery The migratory phenomenon has increased the number of people affected by modern slavery. Migrants in transit through a country are the first to be affected by modern slavery as they attempt to reach their final destination. In Libya, for example, many migrants seeking to join Europe are currently sold as slaves. This trade is due to the country's unprecedented political and security instability resulting from NATO's intervention in 2011. Modern slavery also affects many undocumented immigrants all around the world, including in Europe. Indeed, most are workers without legal status, without social protection and often exploited by their employers. In this context, our session will discuss the legal challenges associated with this scourge and possible legal and policy measures that could improve the protection of these persons.
Bankruptcy Law ■ S. João	Personal Liabilities out of the Insolvency In response to crisis situations, company executives are compelled to take decisions. Although each jurisdiction provides for the type of decisions to be made and the timelines for involvement, it has become necessary to protect the creditors' right to recover their debts. The timeline for and effects of these decisions, and even failure to adopt them, are subject to change and may lead to individuals being held liable. Although the insolvency may be accidental in nature and not result from poor management on the part of company executives, there are often administrative acts that may give rise to personal claims on the part of creditors, or even measures imposed by the courts. Consequently, insolvency law also encompasses analysis of the types of personal liability that may result from corporate financial difficulties, both from the standpoint of the insolvent debtor and that of the debtor's creditors, as well as determination of the effects and the consequences in the various jurisdictions.
2.00 pm - 3.30 pm ■ Special session on the Prague Rules ■ Porto	The Prague Rules: How Much Evidence do you Want to Take in International Arbitration? In December 2018 a new set of rules on the taking of evidence in arbitration will be released: the Rules on the Efficient Conduct of Proceedings in International Arbitration, also known as the "Prague Rules". Prior their official release, the "Prague Rules" have already attracted considerable attention. They are said to be the civil law response to the IBA Rules on the Taking of Evidence in International Arbitration. Some commentators see these rules as contributing to increasing efficiency in international arbitration. This special session on the Prague Rules will provide an analysis of their content, followed by a debate on whether or not they are necessary.
