Introduction

In March 2020, UIA will travel to the San Francisco Bay Area to host an international summit on cross-border litigation in the digital economy. The summit will bring together in-house counsel of major Bay Area and Silicon Valley companies along with the US and non-US lawyers and forensic experts they work with to confront an increasingly global litigation portfolio.

Through six panels over the course of a day and a half at the downtown SF headquarters of the San Francisco Bar Association, participants will engage in interactive discussions of key areas of cross-border disputes: general litigation, intellectual property, antitrust, employment law, data privacy and platform liability questions, criminal investigations, and other international litigation issues. The panels will discuss best practices for cooperation among company lawyers and their domestic and foreign outside lawyers and experts both at the substantive legal level (including vexing questions about cross-border legal privilege and ethical obligations), down to practical logistics such as translation, document collection and review, and retention of expert witnesses. With speakers from both the Bay Area and countries around the world, the summit is a must for lawyers who work in-house on cross-border litigation, interact with foreign lawyers, or represent clients in cross-border disputes.

San Francisco is the ideal locale for the summit. With the most prominent technology and new economy companies headquartered there and in nearby Silicon Valley, the summit will provide extraordinary opportunities for learning, exchange and networking. And of course the city is famous for its spectacular scenery and diverse culture, world-class cuisine, and urban landscape – many consider it the most beautiful and international city in the United States. Plus the Sonoma and Napa wine-growing regions are only an hour away, creating the opportunity for an extraordinary weekend in the vineyards.

Mark your diaries now, save the date and make sure to register!
We are looking forward to welcoming you to San Francisco!

09:15 – 10:45 Cross-Border Litigation: an Overview

US technology and new economy companies find themselves subject to a variety of legal and regulatory regimes when operating in non-US jurisdictions and often face litigation either partly or entirely in non-United States courts or agencies, many times in two or more countries. In-house counsel have to face a variety of substantive legal and logistical issues: how to identify cross-border issues and reconcile the requirements of different regimes, how to select and coordinate lawyers operating in different jurisdictions regarding the same or related issues, and how to ensure that their US and non-US lawyers work together seamlessly. In addition, they face practical questions such as different ethical, privilege and expert witness rules and conflicting discovery and evidence – gathering requirements, as well as more day-to-day issues like document translation and data review. The first session will explore how in-house counsel navigate these difficult issues with their local and foreign counsel and forensic experts.

10:45 – 11:00 Coffee Break

11:00 – 12:30 Antitrust/Competition Issues

US companies often face scrutiny from by antitrust regulators in other countries and in the EU in particular, as well as litigation by foreign plaintiffs. What trends are we seeing? How can US companies best deal with differing antitrust regimes applicable to their global business? Are standards for monopolization and agreements in restraint of trade the same? Are there other types of behavior at issue? How should US companies respond to investigations and the requirements from anti-trust regulators and others for access to evidence?

Moderator: • Ian DE FREITAS, UIA Deputy Director of Commissions, Farrer & Co., London, United Kingdom

Speakers:

- Stuart PLUNKETT, President of The Bar Association of San Francisco (BASF), Alston & Bird, San Francisco, CA

12:30 – 13:30 Lunch

13:30 – 15:00 Employment Issues

The increasing use of technology in the workplace is raising a whole host of employment issues which in turn is generating complicated cross-border disputes, for example, when an employer in the US has an employee abroad, in a jurisdiction where privacy and labor issues may be entirely different. New questions are arising every day in this area. The use of algorithms in the process of hiring and evaluating employee performance and the gathering of biometric data of employees is leading to challenges under different national standards. The monitoring of employees at work and the mix of private and work-related data in that context across borders is also challenging. The multiple devices and platforms on which employees conduct business on behalf their employers or refer to work related matters raises issues in transnational litigation process. How do in-house counsel and US and foreign employment counsel face these litigation challenges?

Moderator & speaker: • Natalie A. PIERCE, Littler, San Francisco, CA, USA

- Chrysty ESPERANZA, Counsel Lead, Litigation, Employment, Legal Ops at Square, San Francisco, CA, USA
- Jason RAY, FTI, Managing Director - Technology Solutions, Portland, OR, USA

- Juliette DUVAL, Duval Legal, Paris, France

15:00 – 15:30 Coffee Break

15:30 – 17:00 Data Privacy and Platform Liability

Two important and interrelated areas of cross-border litigation are new international and European rules governing data privacy and differing regimes regarding platform liability (i.e. the liability of online platforms and networks for the alleged misconduct of platform users). Litigation arising from data privacy is increasing, and litigation is just arising under the new GDPR rules, which is generating confusion and uncertainty – but some general guidelines seem to be taking shape. Privacy regulations often run directly contrary to other interest such as broad discovery requirements in the US or the need to respond to anonymous whistleblower complaints. Many of these issues are just getting fleshed out. Platform liability, on the other hand, has been litigated extensively in both the US and abroad, and companies often face competing principles, rulings and agency approaches. How can a US company wend its way through this web of competing interests and requirements? What role does outside counsel play?

09:00 – 10:30 Criminal Law Investigations, Compliance and Litigation

US companies have been targeted in criminal prosecutions abroad, or required to provide evidence as third-party witnesses, often under regimes in which a broader range of conduct is subject to criminal penalties. In other matters, they have been victimized by others' criminal conduct and are seeking relief in foreign courts. The laws governing such prosecutions are often entirely different than in the United States, including with respect to standards of proof, methods of evidence gathering, privilege against self-incrimination, immunity, plea bargaining, and debarment. What are the areas that may give rise to criminal investigations or prosecutions? How can US companies best deal with the prospect of foreign prosecution and demands for evidence in a criminal case? What role does the new global emphasis on compliance play?

Moderator: • Etienne LESAGE, President of the UIA Criminal Law Commission, Lesage Avocats, Paris, France

Speakers:

- Stephen ADAMS, VP, Litigation, Protection and Compliance at Applied Materials, San Francisco, CA, USA
- Miranda KANE, Kane+Kimball, San Francisco, CA, USA

- Felix RETTENMAIER, Rettenmaier & Adick, Frankfurt, Germany

10:30 – 11:00 Coffee Break

11:00 – 12:30 Intellectual Property Litigation

US companies have a strong interest in protecting their intellectual property around the world, not just in the United States, but they often run up against different legal regimes and unfamiliar substantive and procedural rules. For example, US companies operating in Europe sometimes seek to limit their exposure to EU IP laws and proceedings in national European courts. However, EU IP laws increasingly include mandatory and public policy provisions that seek to ensure that those doing business in the EU cannot avoid the principles of those laws by contracting out of the m or by seeking to exclude the jurisdiction of EU member states' courts to determine IP rights issues. One example of this trend among many others is the new Directive on Copyright in the Digital Single Market. The panel will provide an overview of the challenges US companies face in cross-border IP litigation, including specific issues such as the EU's legislation in this area, and their response to the trend at both the legal and practical levels.
